

Start the ball on line

Get more consistency in your putting

Being able to start the ball on line is the most fundamental skill a golfer needs to master. Being good at green reading or judging the speed of a green is great but if the ball does not start on the intended line, it will most likely miss the hole. With this simple drill we will help you get the ball started on the right line, giving you a head-start on the greens.

1 Start this drill by choosing any starting position you like. Move behind the ball and try to visualize the starting line.

2 Now place two balls next to the intended line at approximately 1 foot away.

3 Once you blend in the Ideal Line you will be able to see if you chose the correct starting line. Correct the ball positions if necessary.

4 Now, get ready to putt the ball and try to start your ball on your intended starting line.

5 In case you hit one of the other balls, you know you didn't start the ball on line. Just try again until you hit the ball through the gate.

6 Well done! Make sure you manage to get the ball to pass through the gate consistently. So next time you are on the green, you know that you are able to start the ball on your intended line!

In order to do this drill you do not necessarily need a PuttView System. If you choose to do this drill on a regular green, choose a putt and place the balls according to the steps mentioned above. You will still get feedback on your ability to start your ball on line, however you won't know if your starting line matches with the ideal line of your chosen putt. PuttView will make the learning experience more simple and effective through visualization of the Ideal Line and real-time Ball Tracking.
